Government's design watchdog complains about plans for Spurs'
superstadium complex

By Lucy Purdy

PLANS for a new multi-million-pound Spurs stadium have been plunged into uncertainty after the design was attacked by government watchdog Cabe.

Experts from the Commission For Architecture And The Built Environment have slammed the proposed stadium plan, saying it is disjointed and "compromised" by its setting. In a scathing report, they expressed disappointment with the design of the 56,000-capacity stadium, proposed for a 20-acre site to the east of Tottenham High Road, saying the three elements – stadium, supermarket and housing – feel like "very separate projects".

The quality of the proposed 434 homes – mostly small flats – was also questioned and doubts raised about the impact the scheme could have on existing businesses.

But Spurs promise the plan will plough hundreds of millions of pounds into the North Tottenham conservation area, creating much needed jobs, homes and public spaces as well as securing the club's long-term future here.

A Cabe spokesman said: "Although the panel praised the designs for the stadium itself, and thinks it could be an iconic, exemplary building, it is compromised by its setting.

"We're concerned the masterplan for the site is not evident, resulting in the different elements feeling like very separate projects. The panel criticised the quality of the housing, the unambitious design of the supermarket with ground-floor parking which will not create an attractive streetscape and the public realm around the stadium, which has the feeling of left-over space."

But Spurs have stood by the design, drawn up by Make architects and Martha Schwartz Partners, saying it is the result of two years of planning and is unlikely to change significantly now.

"We take on board the comments that Cabe makes but believe this is a high-quality scheme which will deliver lasting benefits for the community as well securing the long-term future of the club in Tottenham," said project director Paul Phillips.

He added that hundreds have written to Haringey Council in support of the scheme, including Haringey police, the Haringey Business Board and NHS Haringey.

The Victorian Society has already come out against the proposals, saying "huge swathes of historic cityscape" would be wiped out if it gets the green light.

Ken Shuttleworth, founder of Make Architects, added: "Our role is to weigh up all the various views and we believe we have produced the right scheme.

"There are always a range of views on any project and our job is to ensure balance. We strongly believe our design is appropriate for the future needs of the wider Tottenham area and of the club, and will create a long-lasting amenity which would benefit the whole community."

Plans for the stadium were released in November last year and are currently being considered by the council.

Photographer wins the plaudits but sparks 'Mona Lisa' mystery

By Lucy Purdy

A SMOULDERING portrait of a female boxer has catapulted a photographer from Tottenham into the limelight – but the woman's identity remains an intriguing mystery.

Inzajeano Latif, of Manor Road, was thrilled when his striking portrait was selected for the prestigious Taylor Wessing Portrait Prize and hung on the hallowed walls of the National Portrait Gallery. But Inzajeano has been unable to share the success with the woman he photographed – she was one of many he captured at the All Stars Boxing Gym in Ladbroke Grove but she not returned since and no one has been able to trace her.

Inzajeano, 30, said: "I went down every Sunday for four months, shooting the girls after their hard training sessions. I wanted to capture their intensity and sweat on camera. I took loads of photos but submitted five and this one has been on posters on the Underground and all sorts – I see her everywhere!"

"But no one knows her name or where she is. I think it adds a sense of mystery, almost like Mona Lisa. Why does she look so tense? What has she been through? Where is she now? I do think it adds weight to the portrait but I wouldn't mind getting in touch with her."

Inzajeano is currently working toward an MA in photography at Middlesex University after he changed direction from a career in fashion. Now he specialises in portraiture of "everyday people" and landscapes, particularly of the sites and scenes around Tottenham which hold personal significance for him.

"Tottenham wouldn't necessarily seem an ideal place to photograph," he admitted, "but there is a particular diversity here which I think needs to be seen by the outside world."

"I'm intrigued by the everyday and ordinary people, to me they hold a lot more importance than someone like Gordon Brown."

"Capturing everyday people in their own environment is how you get intensity out of a portrait."

Now Inzajeano seems to be on course to fulfill his ultimate dream, to have a solo exhibition at the Museum of Modern Art in New York.

Find out more about his work at www.inzajeano.com or see his photograph at the National Portrait Gallery until Saturday, February 14.

Actress lends support as Jacksons Lane puts on fundraising scheme

Juliet Stevenson backs theatre's fundraising drive – and explains why Truly Madly Deeply is one of the roles she's most proud of

LAST year was a vintage one for one of our best actresses. Juliet Stevenson stood astride the worlds of stage and screen winning a host of award nominations for her hugely emotional portrayal of an MS sufferer in Duet For One, while in the ITV drama A Place Of Execution she played a struggling single mum to numerous plaudits.

Today, standing outside her local arts centre on Archway Road, Juliet is wearing her theatre hat to promote Jacksons Lane's new membership scheme, intended to raise much-needed funds for the venue. But out of the two, is theatre her favourite place of entertainment?

"Y'know, it probably is," she said over a cup of tea following the wintry photoshoot. "I love the cinema and have this incredible contentment when a movie is about to start, but the moment I sit in a theatre and the lights go down, you know what you are about to watch has that anarchic element in it because it's alive."

"It can be terrible but it can be magnificent. It goes to both extremes and you're a part of it – spectator and participant – whereas cinema is more of a dead event."

Fortunately, Jacksons Lane has returned to life following severe worries about its future a couple of years ago – a relief to Juliet, who has used the venue for children's parties, performances and rehearsal space for the past 15 years.

"My main connection these days is with my children, who use it a lot, but I do love it," she said.

"I consider myself a loyal member and what they are doing now in the theatre with their focus on circus and cabaret is interesting and innovative and they have branched out to become as much an arts centre as a community centre, and I like both aspects."

For the first time in what must seem like decades – three to be precise – Juliet has little clue what work she'll be doing in the future and seems to appreciate the break. Having performed eight times a week last year as Stephanie Anderson in Duet For One, she can afford to rest on her laurels a little – but still admits to a sense of loss that one of her most satisfying roles is now over.

"I miss her – she was such a great character. You create these characters and they bubble around in your bloodstream for a year or whatever and sometimes, when you stop doing them, it's like you've lost something more than a friend. It's like some part of yourself has been put away in a crate and the lid has to come down and you think, 'Oh. When will I ever get that part of myself out again?'"

But, if you never worked again, what role would you be most proud of? I'm hoping she mentions one of my favourite British films: Truly, Madly, Deeply...

"Well, I think I should leave that to the “Theatre can be terrible but it can be magnificent – it goes to both extremes.”

audiences. But what I would like to say to them is, 'Was anything useful to you?' and I suppose if I ask that then it would be Truly, Madly, Deeply. [Yes!]

"Almost everyone in the world has or will at some point experience great loss. It doesn't have to be someone who died but it can be the loss of a marriage, possession or identity and I think there was something about that film which was useful to people. There was an alchemy there and something happened when we made Truly, Madly, Deeply and you can't legislate for that or plan it."

Dream holiday for brave little Starr

By Lucy Purdy

A BRAVE cancer sufferer from Muswell Hill enjoyed the holiday of a lifetime after a wish-granting charity heard of her battle.

Starr Stephenson-Peck spent a week in sunny Jamaica along with her parents and brothers as part of a trip organised by Starlight Children's Foundation.

The plucky seven-year-old was diagnosed with acute lymphoblastic leukaemia, an aggressive childhood cancer, when she was three and has endured years of chemotherapy including treatment at Great Ormond Street Hospital.

Her mother Amanda Peck said the trip had been like a "light at the end of the tunnel".

"Starr has spent a lot of time in hospital and went through a bad time," she explained.

"The treatment damaged her immune system so she got a lot of secondary infections and was in hospital for more time than she was out.

"Though Starr was the one with the illness, we all suffered as a family. Her brothers felt they were pushed down the ranks a bit because there wasn't enough time in the day. But what can you do? You have to soldier on – and Starr is always so brave."

The family stayed in a swanky hotel in Montego Bay, saw cliff-jumpers on the famous Negril Beach, plucked coconuts straight from the tree, went jet-skiing and even had time to visit relatives. Starr had previously missed out on a trip to Disneyland Paris organised by black cab drivers because she had to be rushed into hospital at the eleventh hour. This time, even brothers Mitchell, 17, and 11-year-old Teejay were able to join in the fun.

Starr is now in remission and has returned to lessons alongside her friends at Hollickwood Primary School, in Sydney Road, Muswell Hill.

Amanda added: "After years of treatment and anguish, it's amazing to have such a great start to a new beginning – we didn't want to come home!"

Starlight grants once-in-a-lifetime wishes for seriously and terminally ill children. Donate to the cause by visiting www.starlight.org.uk

More people will qualify for the basic State Pension

Find out how you can boost your State Pension

Now that people are living longer, healthier lives - how do we make sure we can live those later years well? Those of us reaching State Pension age today could spend 20 years in retirement so it's important to think about how to fund those extra years. The State Pension will provide a foundation for the future, but you may also want to build up extra funds to make sure you can get the most out of those later years

So what is the basic State Pension?

The basic State Pension is a regular income you may get once you've reached State Pension age. The full basic State Pension is currently around £95 a week. But the amount you get depends on the number of qualifying years you've built up, usually through working. The government may also have paid some contributions for you if you've been a carer, or claimed certain benefits, or you may have voluntarily bought some contributions.

How's it changing?

From 6 April 2010 it will be easier for people to build up a full basic State Pension. Men and women will only need 30 years of National Insurance contributions to get the full amount - a reduction from normally 39 years for women and 44 for men.

Also from 6 April 2010, if you're caring for one or more sick or disabled people for 20 hours a week or more, you may be able to claim Carer's Credit, which could help you build up your State Pension.

Plus the State Pension age for women will gradually rise over the next 10 years from 60 to 65 to match men's.

Who needs to take action? If you're a carer, approaching retirement or recently retired, and you've taken time out of the workforce, you should find out whether there are things you can do now to boost your State Pension. Visit www.direct.gov.uk/betterfuture or call 0800 678 1132 to find out more.

What do the changes really mean?

Here's Stan's story...

I'm 64 and I've been working in the UK since I was 18 but I've also spent some time working in Dubai. Will I get a full basic State Pension?

It depends how many years of National Insurance contributions you've clocked up. Men normally need 44 years of contributions to get a full basic State Pension, but from 6 April 2010 the number of years you need is going down to 30 for both men and women. But as you've worked overseas for some time you may have gaps in your record.

Is there anything I can do to fill in the gaps and boost my State Pension?

The first thing you need to do is check out if you have any gaps. If you do, you may be able to fill them by buying voluntary National Insurance contributions. If you have gaps in the last six years you may be able to plug those, and depending on when you reach State Pension age, you may be able to buy up to six extra years, to fill gaps back to the tax year, 1975-76.

I really enjoy my job so I'd like to continue working for a few more years. Will that change things?

Working past State Pension age can be financially beneficial as you stop paying National Insurance and, if you decide to put off claiming your State Pension you'll get more money for the future when you do come to claim it - either in a lump sum or a higher weekly amount. Or you could choose to keep on working and claim your State Pension at the same time.

Remember that everyone's circumstances are different so it's important to check your options before making any decisions.

Stan's circumstances are based on a real-life situation.

We're making it easier for more people to build up a full basic State Pension. We're reducing the number of years you have to work or care for someone to get the full amount. It was 44 years for men and 39 years for women. From this April it will be 30 years for everyone.

Dad and son help children Smile

Teamwork:
Louis and Maurice
Cohen

DOCTORS at North Middlesex University Hospital have helped put smiles on the faces of children around the world after a schoolboy urged them to support his school charity.

Operation Smile funds medical treatment for children living in developing countries who suffer from cleft lips and cleft palates, meaning they often cannot speak properly or even form a smile. Tetherdown Primary School pupil Louis Cohen, eight, asked his father Maurice, who works as a consultant at the Edmonton hospital, to help with the appeal after learning about it at school. After doctors rallied round, 200 theatre drapes were donated, meaning more will receive life-changing surgery.

Mr Cohen, consultant for care of the elderly, said: "The operation costs only £150 and can take as little as 45 minutes to repair a child's cleft lip and improve the quality of their life forever. We are privileged to be living in Britain, where such treatment is freely available to those that need it, and it's great that the North Mid has done its bit to ensure those across the globe have access to this treatment."

The drapes will be used to cover patients during an operation, essential in ensuring operations are as sterile as possible. As they can be reused, they'll be invaluable in aiding more operations for years to come.

Evelyn Pittman, headteacher at the school in Grand Avenue, Muswell Hill, added: "The children thoroughly enjoyed their project to help others who are not as lucky as themselves and who do not have the same access to the operations they need."

"They were absolutely delighted that Dr Cohen was able to add so many drapes and hope it will make a huge difference to many other children's lives."

Holocaust victims are remembered in memorial ceremonies across the borough

By Lucy Purdy

POIGNANT ceremonies have taken place in Haringey in the past week to honour the millions who lost their lives during the Nazi genocide and in more recent atrocities.

A multi-faith service took place in the Holocaust Memorial Gardens at Bruce Castle as part of events across the country on January 27, national Holocaust Memorial Day. The six million Jews and countless others who died in the Nazi genocide were remembered, as well as those who have perished in genocides in Cambodia, Rwanda, Bosnia and, most recently, Darfur.

Faith leaders, politicians, police, Holocaust survivors, residents and children gathered for the service, with prayers being led by Rabbi James Baaden and Father Simon Clarke. Guests also listened to klezmer music, watched documentaries made by young people from Haringey highlighting the memories of Holocaust survivors, and helped raise the memorial flag.

Haringey mayor Bernice Vanier,

Tottenham MP David Lammy, Hornsey and Wood Green MP Lynne Featherstone, council leader Claire Kober and Lib Dem leader Robert Gorrie each gave poetry readings before listening to a peal of bells from All Hallows Church.

Councillor Kaushika Amin, cabinet member for community cohesion and involvement, said: "The entire day was very emotional. It was incredibly moving to see so many different people come together to pay their respects. It's so important that we remember the Holocaust, and that we continue to strive to learn from the lessons of the past."

On Tuesday evening a screening took place at the Bernie Grant Arts Centre in Tottenham of four documentaries by young film makers focusing on the memories of local Holocaust survivors.

Teenage film makers and the subjects of their films – Roman Halter, Martha Blend, Ruth Schneider and Moshe Galili – gathered to watch the documentaries, which premiered at London's British Film Institute last year.

Listing protection for Bounds Green Tube

BOUNDS GREEN Underground station has been awarded Grade II-listed status for its striking Art Deco architecture. Bounds Green councillor John Oakes received a letter from English Heritage on Thursday confirming the 1930s-built station will now be protected under listed status. Councillor Oakes, who has campaigned for two years to get the station listed, said it would preserve it for generations to come. He said: "I'm a great admirer of all sorts of architectural styles, but Art Deco is so distinctive. This is one of the nicest buildings in Bounds Green – so distinctive and forceful. I'm enormously pleased at this news for the people of Bounds Green."

Banker forced to steal £1m by abusive partner

By Kim Inam

A BANK worker who admitted stealing almost a million pounds from her work while living in Stroud Green, has been found not guilty because her ex-boyfriend forced her to commit the crime.

Ania Wadsworth, now of Waterlow Road, Archway, was found not guilty of stealing £921,716 from the Lloyds TSB cash machines between 2002 and 2007 – despite admitting taking the money. The 28-year-old told the court she was forced to steal by her cocaine-addict and abusive boyfriend Keith Preddie.

Wadsworth, who was 15 when she first met Preddie in 1997, told the court she had wanted to get out of the relationship within weeks.

Summing up the evidence on Thursday, Judge Richard Hone said: “He started cutting her off from her friends. She said she tried to get out of the relationship but it was scary. She said she had to steal, if she didn’t Preddie would beat her up and threaten to kill her family. She says if there was any other way she would have taken it.

“She stole money from the cash tills whenever he wanted cash, he would wait for her at home then go out and buy drugs.”

Wadsworth also told the jury she left school because Preddie told her to go to work and earn money. She started working for Lloyds TSB in Golders Green in 2000 when she was living with Preddie in Ilex House in Crouch Hill. The court heard how Wadsworth, who displayed symptoms of battered-woman syndrome and post-traumatic stress, initially started taking small amounts from cashier desks and then moved on to taking wads of up to £25,000 from the cash machines and hiding the discrepancy with transfers between non-personal accounts.

But 30-year-old Preddie, now living in Essex, denied that he dealt drugs or was abusive to Wadsworth. He also said he had no knowledge of the thefts and thought she came from a wealthy family. Wadsworth was seen as a trusted member of staff by her branch manager who described her as “mature beyond her years, with a bubbly personality, easy to get on with, intelligent and appeared to be ambitious.”

Preddie was found guilty of laundering £145,370 and will be sentenced at the Old Bailey on March 5.

Astro Boy is no star

Astro Boy (PG)

Dir: David Bowers

Starring: (voices of) Freddie Highmore, Kristen Bell, Bill Nighy

LAST year's Up from Pixar confirmed we are living through a golden age of animation.

In the past few years we have been spoilt with some wonderfully witty, constantly creative examples of the genre (Ratatouille is a masterpiece) to ensure that anything which falls below the benchmark is given short shrift.

Perhaps a decade ago I would've been more charitable to Astro Boy – based on the famed Japanese manga comic – but we've now seen much of this done so much better.

It still has its plus points, chiefly the bizarre plot. Futuristic, floating Metro City is dominated by robots. These aren't the clanking psychos of Terminator, but exist purely to perform subservient tasks to free us up for the fun stuff.

Genius kid Toby (Highmore) is desperate to see the latest metal-head, designed by his equally clever dad Dr Tenman (Nicolas Cage). But the benign blue energy used to power The Peacekeeper is substituted for bad red energy by evil President Stone (Donald Sutherland), so The Peacekeeper goes mental and kills Toby. That's right, kids – the lead character is DEAD. But Tenman quickly designs a new Toby as a robot with super-human powers called Astro Boy, who has turbo-charged feet and an array of deadly weapons, including machine guns that come out of his butt.

The first half is interesting and I half hoped it would spiral off into Blade Runner meets classic horror The Monkey's Paw, as Astro Boy is crushed by existential angst and returns to confront his maker.

But director and co-writer Bowers then runs out of ideas and I found myself getting rather annoyed by the supposedly cute robots used to fill up time and space as we run down the requisite 90 minutes.

It also has an extremely irritating character called Dr Elefun (Nighy) who spouts such sentimental garbage as "That robot has more humanity than the rest of us", which made me wish The Peacekeeper would get mechanical on his fat, bulbous head.

by Jonathan Lovett

Now Showing...

Sex & Drugs & Rock & Roll (15)

The life and rhymes of rock's most passionate polio poet is colourfully recorded in this dynamic homage featuring a pulsating performance from Andy Serkis as the main man, Ian Dury.

Precious: Based on the Novel "Push" by Sapphire (15)

Extraordinary slice of life picked snarling from the streets of Harlem circa 1987. Obese Claireece "Precious" Jones endures humiliations and abuse before she finds acceptance in an alternative school offering her a shard of hope.

A Prophet (18)

Goodfellas duffs up The Shawshank Redemption in this violent French tale of one man's rise to the top in the clink. One of the best prison dramas, this taut thriller ensures two and a half hours skid pass in snappy style.

Nine (12A)

Daniel Day Lewis and a host of A-list beauties capture the style – if not substance – of a 1960s Fellini film as a director tries to overcome writers' block. Rob Marshall tries to dazzle us but suffers from a lack of decent songs.

Roar emotion: Keane will join Celtic until the summer but would not speculate on his Spurs future

HOOPS IN KEANE SWOOP

Spurs skipper gets 'dream' move to Celtic until end of the season

By Lee Husson

TOTTENHAM manager Harry Redknapp has allowed Robbie Keane to join Celtic on loan until the season, and insisted that the move was a good one for the Republic of Ireland captain.

Keane emerged as a potential target for the Bhoys late on transfer deadline day.

The striker had found himself out of favour at White Hart Lane this season, slipping behind Jermain Defoe and Peter Crouch in the pecking order.

And with former Chelsea and Barcelona front-man Eidur Gudjohnsen joining Spurs from Monaco last week, Redknapp was reluctant to stand in Keane's way.

"It's a good move. Robbie needs to play," Redknapp said.

"He's too good a player not to be starting here regularly. It's been difficult to guarantee Robbie a starting place at the moment.

"But he loves his football. He's a great trainer and a great man about the place.

"To go to Celtic is a dream come true for him. He's a big Celtic man and he'd like to go up there and play like Roy Keane did.

"The Irish lads, it's in their blood and they dream of playing for Celtic one day.

"This opportunity is one they want to take and we don't want to stand in his way, because we're strong in that position."

Keane was given a hero's welcome by hundreds of fans after being unveiled at Parkhead.

"It's absolutely unbelievable," he said.

"This is the reason why I've always wanted to come to Celtic.

"It's no secret over the years I've been a Celtic fan. I'm hoping to bring a lot of success in the short time I'm here.

"It's overwhelming, an incredible reception. You never think as a player that you're going to get that kind of reception.

"I played against Celtic a few times and I've always got a great reception but that was unbelievable.

"I always wanted to play for Celtic and it works out well for both parties."

Brilliant Baptiste shines in Glasgow

SPRINTER Leon Baptiste enjoyed one of the best victories of his career on Saturday as he overcame a strong field including former Olympic champion Shawn Crawford to win the 200metres at the Aviva International in Glasgow.

Competing for Great Britain against teams from the United States of America, Sweden, Germany and a Commonwealth Select squad, the 24-year-old from Enfield and Haringey Athletic Club was expected to finish in third or fourth place in his event.

But Baptiste took full advantage of a blistering start – usually one of the weak points of his race – to pull clear of the field and cross the line in a time of 21.34seconds, with Crawford, Olympic champion in 2004 and world indoor champion over the distance nine years ago, a distant fourth.

"I'm really pleased," he said. "I was inspired by the guys in the race. It gives me a lot of confidence going into the outdoor season.

"Unfortunately they don't do 200m at the World Indoor Championships, but that performance puts me in really good shape.

"I'm in the sport to win Olympic medals and World Championship medals. Obviously this year I've got the Europeans, and that is what I'm aiming for."

Skolars smashed by rampant Rams

THE London Skolars' difficult start to the season continued on Sunday when they were crushed 50-4 by Dewsbury Rams in their opening match in the Northern Rail Cup.

James Massara's men had been beaten 56-0 by Harlequins in the Capital Challenge the previous week, and they fared little better against a side who only lost twice last season.

The cold and icy conditions in Yorkshire meant that the game was close to postponement, but the hosts lost no time in establishing an early lead as Rob Spicer crashed through the Skolars' defence.

Dewsbury were utterly dominant prior to the interval and further tries from Rob Lunt, Mike Emmett, Bryn Powell, Scott Turner, Scott Watson and Adam Robinson meant that the match was effectively over as a contest by the interval.

Although the Skolars enjoyed more possession in the second half, it was Dewsbury who continued to look the more threatening side, with Andy Bostock, James Haynes and Lunt all crossing the line.

The visitors did at least have the consolation of scoring a late try through Smokie Junior, but the game ended on a sour note as Liam Prescott saw red for punching – leaving the field on a stretcher after Dewsbury's Anthony England, who also made an early exit, retaliated.

The London Skolars are back in action when they take on Hunslet Hawks at the New River Stadium on Sunday (2pm).
